Cold morning temperatures kept most of the regulars home in their warm beds. Those that made it to the range found the temperatures very tolerable as the morning progressed. That evil east wind got up while the 600 yard match was being fired and it had its normal effect.

Daniel Miller returned to the high power firing line after an absence of several years. Daniel left us for a tour with the Marines and is now waiting for the birth of a daughter in late January. We are glad to have Daniel back into shooting and congratulate him on his future addition. Match winner was Robert Langham as he was the standing, sitting and prone slowfire winner. David Keys was the combined class winner.

Be sure to check the match program for the dates of the matches in 2007. There were some unusual calendar issues that required some different scheduling. The Guard rescheduled the TSRA high power championship date into May and loaded it up to the point of our matches conflicting with each other. Moving the regional into April and avoiding Easter and Mother's day didn't leave much wiggle room. This actually puts the regional back to where it was when we first began holding them. With the changes to the start and end of Daylight Savings time, we will have that hour back in time to benefit both early and later in the year.

Check the programs and mark you calendar. Be watching for the opening of a new range south of Shreveport that will have 15 targets and firing out to 1000 yards. The club is named the Long Range Alley, LLC and is part of a commercial operations that will provide tactical training for individuals and agency personel.
